Q: What does it mean to you to be a judge for the Women in Credit Awards?

MT: It's a fantastic opportunity to support and recognise the work of women. To raise awareness and inspire others through shining a light on these role models.

Q: What are you doing in your current role to raise awareness around gender diversity?

MT: I am a founding member of Ofgem's ethnic diversity group which champions gender diversity. In my day to day work of championing consumers in energy sector, I speak out and shine a light on impact on different group including women and champion change. .

Q: What is the importance of being a finalist at the Women in Credit Awards?

MT: Being a finalist brings recognition, it's an opportunity to inspire others and to build strategic networks to bring about impactful change.

Q: What are you looking for in a winning entry?

MT: I will be looking for passion to make an impact, innovative approach, inspiring others and facilitating positive change.
